A fun little quick cabbage soup recipe. The whole process took about 30-45 minutes, so its perfect for a weeknight dinner. Straining is not necessary if you blend it smooth enough. Add a fried egg on top and it's perfect for breakfast! If you don't like cabbage, substitute it for leeks or anything. Buttermilk, it tastes great, and I'm pretty sure it's good for you. It has a slight punch from the jalapeno. The oyster crackers are fun, kinda taste like cheez- its. If you don't want to turn on the oven, toast the crackers on the stovetop over low heat.

Recipe: Makes about 2 quarts - serves 4-6

- 1/4 tsp whole coriander
- 1/4 tsp caraway
- 1/4 tsp black peppercorns
- 3 medium shallots, sliced
- 1 inch of ginger, sliced
- 3 garlic cloves, smashed
- 1 jalapeno, sliced
- 1/4 head of cabbage, sliced
- 1 medium yukon gold potato, sliced
- 6 cups dashi, substitute with chicken or vegetable stock
- 1 cup buttermilk

- 3 oz nduja
- 2 Tbsp unsalted butter
- 1 cup oyster crackers.
- 2 Tbsp furikake, more if desired
- Salt and pepper, to taste
- Dill, for garnish

1. Preheat oven to 350F
2. Coat the bottom of a medium pot with a bit of olive oil and heat over medium heat.
3. Toast spices in olive oil until fragrant. About 2 minutes.
4. Add in shallots, ginger, garlic and jalapeno. Cook until softened about 5 minutes.
5. Add in cabbage and potato. Cook until it has slightly softened. About 5 minutes.
6. Pour in dashi and buttermilk. Simmer for about 30 minutes.
7. As soup simmers- In an oven-safe pan, cook nduja over low heat, about 4 minutes.
8. Once nduja is slightly crispy and fat has rendered out, pour over strainer and reserve both oil and meat.
9. In the same saucepan you cooked the nduja, over medium heat, add butter and reserved nduja oil.
10. Once butter is melted, add in oyster crackers and toss until evenly coated.
11. Immediately, toss with furikake and place in oven until crispy. About 5 minutes. Set crackers aside.
12. Once cabbage and potatoes are tender. Blend soup on high until very smooth.
13. Strain through a fine mesh sieve if desired. This just gives the soup a super smooth finish. Season with salt and pepper to your liking.
14. Top with nduja furikake oyster crackers, crispy nduja and dill.
