Step 1.

Heat oven to 200c. Slice the blocks of tofu in 2cm chunks , then toss with half the olive oil and all of the ground coriander. Season with salt and pepper.

Step 2.

Cut the cauliflower into florets, add to a baking tray and drizzle with the rest of the olive oil, then season with salt and pepper. Slide into the oven and cook for 15-20 minutes.

Step 3.

Tip the tahini into a bowl and add the juice of half of the lemon, don’t worry – it’ll seize up! Add water, 1 tbsp at a time until it loosens to a drizzle-able consistency. Season well with salt and pepper and set aside.

Step 4.

Heat a large frying pan over a high heat, once hot, add the tofu, cooking for 5- 6 mins, until golden. Then set aside.

Step 5.

Add the quinoa to a large bowl along with the miso paste. Roughly chop most of the coriander, saving some leaves to serve, and stir the chopped coriander through the quinoa with the rest of the lemon juice. Taste and season well.

Step 6.

Serve the quinoa topped with the cauliflower and tofu. Drizzle with the sesame dressing and top with more coriander, and a sprinkle of sesame seeds.
